P. F. DEGRAND,

bly to thy desire, I forward to thee a list of the SHIPS now employed in the whale y the people of the small Island of Nantucket. This list, it will be observed, contains Ships, in addition to which many Brigs and other vessels are employed by them in the ery; a few I subjoin, from present recollection. When we consider the numerous other gaged in the coasting and other commercial trade of the Island; the small number of nts it contains, and that the Island itself is but a speck upon the bordering waters of our epublic; and moreover, that almost the whole of their shipping was captured or destroyed so recently as the last war; we are struck with admiration at the invincible hardihood and industry of this little active, enterprising and friendly community, whose harpoons have penetrated with success every nook and corner of every ocean. At the same time, it will afford thee, and every patriot, a grateful spectacle of the encreasing riches, prosperity and happiness of our great and growing Republic. Such enterprise, activity, perseverance and success are the natural and inevitable results of the freedom, and republican systems of goverment, which distinguish ours, from every other country. I remain thy friend J. E. S.

* Taken fo[illegible]

In Wellington, (Mass.) Widow Mary Briggs, aged 102 years, leaving nine children of the following ages: Samuel, 79; Elizabeth, 77; Jemima, 73; Hannah, 72; Abiezer, 70; Abner, 68; Roby, 63; Zebeda, 60; Eliakim, 57: 56 grand-children, and 47 great-grand-children.

Mutiny and Murder.—By ship Palladium, arrived at this port, we learn that ship Globe, of Nantucket, arrived at Valparaiso, about the middle of June, under command of Smith, one of the boat steerers, the crew having mutinied and murdered the captain and both mates, viz: Thomas Worth, Captain, William Beetle, 1st mate, and John Lombard, 2d mate. The particulars relative to this horrid affair, as far as they could be ascertained were obtained from Capt. Eddison, of the Belle. It appears the mutineers took the ship to the Mulgrave Islands, with the intention of remaining, after taking ashore every thing useful; that they quarrelled among themselves as to who should be Captain, and shot the head mutineer, named Comstock (one of the boat steerers, of New York,) and afterwards hung the Steward, suspecting him not to be favorably disposed towards them, that while most of the mutineers were ashore, Smith and a few men and boys left on board, who had apparently joined in the mutiny, but only so through fear, seized the opportunity to save the property and themselves by cutting the cables and making sail from the island. On the Coast of Peru she fell in with a vessel the mate of which went on board and took her safe into Valparaiso, where she was taken possession of by the American Consul and would sail soon for Nantucket under command of Thomas Raymond.

We further learn from Capt. Macy, that the Mutineers of the Globe intended to have burnt the ship; that only six persons arrived in the Globe at Valparaiso, and they were confined on board an English and French vessel of war, there being no American armed vessel in the port; and that 11 of the crew were left at the Mulgrave Islands, situated in lat. 7, S lon. 173 E.

A VESSEL'S EVENTFUL HISTORY.

The San Francisco Alta gives the following history of a vessel, which after serving for many years as a floating landing-place from the steamers at Sacramento, Cal., has recently been sold, and is to be rebuilt, if her timbers prove sound enough: "The Globe, 293 tons, left the East in charge of Capt. Thomas Worth, for the Pacific, on Dec. 29, 1822, and arrived here on Nov. 14, 1824, with 372 barrels of sperm oil. Four of the crew of this ship, headed by Samuel Comstock, mutinied on the night of Jan. 25, 1823, and murdered Capt. Worth, Mr. Buete, Mr. Lambert, and Mr. Fisher, and carried the ship to one of the Mulgrave Islands with the intention of destroying her. After taking out most of the provisions, sails, &c., they quarreled and shot Sam Comstock, having previously hung one of the mutineers. Sam Comstock's brother, George, a boy seventeen years old, assisted by Gilbert Smith, boat-steerer, and five of the crew, made their escape with the ship and arrived safe at Valparaiso. Commodore Hull, in command of the United States ships in the Pacific, sent the schooner Dolphin, Lieut. Percival, to the Mulgrave Islands after the survivors, viz.: Silas Payne and John Oliver, mutineers; Thomas Libeston, Cyrus M. Hussey, Roland Coffin, Columbus Worth, William Lay, Roland Jones, and a native of the Sandwich Islands. Lieut. Percival found Cyrus M. Massey and William Lay, the only survivers, the other having been killed by the natives. Hussey and Lay arrived safe at Nantucket, and Lay published a narrative of the mutiny."

MESSRS. EDITORS:—A few words from a source beyond all question, will settle the point that the bark mentioned in the San Francisco papers is not the old Globe of Nantucket, which was made famous by the bloody mutiny. The information is obtained from Mr. George H. Macy, now proprietor of the "Macy House," Atlantic City, N. J., who, in 1828, sailed as cabin boy with his father in the Globe. He writes:

"The ship Globe was sold at Montevideo, about April, 1830. Father and I boarded on shore there, six weeks, and saw them breaking her up. We came home as passengers in the brig Harriet of Baltimore with Capt. Gibson, and arrived home in September, 1830."

THE YOUNG MUTINEER.

The following lines on the "Young Mutineer" were composed by Henry Glover, of Nantucket, upon the mutiny on board the ship Globe, of this port, which took place on the 26th of January, 1824, in the North Pacific Ocean. The chief mutineers were Samuel B. Comstock, of New York, Silas Payne, of Rhode Island, and John Oliver, of Shields, England. Comstock, the young mutineer, was shot by his two guilty comrades, Payne and Oliver. They, with three innocent persons, were killed by the natives of the islands, (Mulgrave). Two innocent persons, viz: William Lay and Cyrus M. Hussey, were taken from the Mulgrave Islands, by Captain Percival, in the U. S. schooner Dolphin, carried to Valparaiso and Callao, where they were transferred to the frigate United States, and arrived at New York, April 22d, 1825. Six returned in the Globe, from those Islands. Capt. Thomas Worth, the two mates, and two other persons were killed on board the ship by the mutineers:

O'er the caves of the ocean the gallant ship sped,
Where the sea coral shines like the bright ruby red;
Where the blue sapphire studs the tall arches of green,
Where the wild Naiad roves, and the mermaid is seen;
And naught on her track spake of incident drear,
Save the fiend in the breast of the young mutineer.

O'er the wild stormy ocean the gallant ship sailed,
Till the far southern islands were joyfully hailed,
Where they fondly had hoped from the depths of the water,
The leviathan to draw, for a red, cruel slaughter.
Nor dreamed that a horrid death waited them there,
From the arm and the knife of the young mutineer.

But crushed were their hopes when at midnight's dread hour,
A shot and a blow spake the murderer's power,
And those who were bedded in safety to sleep,
Changed that bed for a grave in the billowy deep;
The sea-moan their requiem, a hammock their bier,
Their bearers the band of the young mutineer.

But short was the hour of that murderous band,
And few were their days in that wild, foreign land,
Which is washed by the wave of the same briny flood,
That drank the red cup of their innocent blood!
And bitter and short was the cruel career
Of the fiend in the breast of the young mutineer.

His sun rose unclouded, and brightly it shone,
In the pride of the morning, and promised a noon
Of glory and gladness. It sank to the flood
In blackness and blindness, and blasted by blood;
Disowned and dishonored, its last gloomy glare
Was shed on the grave of the young mutineer.

Though beardless his cheek, yet his was a soul
That ne'er knew a master, that brooked not control;
Though beardless his cheek, yet his was a hand
Acquainted with daggers; a voice to command,
An eye that ne'er wept, a heart without fear,
Were the pride and the boast of the young mutineer.

Yet he lies on the beach of a lone desert isle,
And his dirge the green waves are chanting the while,
As they in wild tumult roll over his head,
And wash the high rock that marks his wet bed;
Where lie, with a heart that ne'er knew a fear,
The mangled remains of the young mutineer,

He lies on the beach the cold waters beside,
And dreadful and dark was the death that he died.
No mother mourns o'er him; no fond fair one weeps,
Where far from the land of his fathers he sleeps;
But the chill wild winds whistle, the sea birds career
O'er the wet sandy grave of the young mutineer.

He lies on the beach by a comrade in guilt,
His forehead was cloven, his best blood was spilt;
The cries of his victims had risen to God,
And their wailings were quenched in the murderer's blood.
He fell—yet none mourn'd their leader, none shed a tear,
O'er the mangled remains of the young mutineer.

He fell on the shore with a heart-rending yell,
Wild and despairing he sank down to hell;
His glazed eyes in horror were turned up to heaven,
His last cry to the skies in wild echoes was given.—
In vain it ascended, no mercy was there,
To cheer the dark death of the young mutineer.

He lies on the shore where the weeds and the shells,
Mark the bounds of the sea as in tumult it swells;
They scooped out a grave, and there laid him at rest,
And they heaped the wet sand on his bare, bloody breast;
And they rolled a huge rock, and they planted it there,
To mark the lone grave of the young mutineer.

In years that are coming, the seamen shall tell
Of the murderer's spectre, and the murderer's yell;
And the tale the lone watches of night will beguile,
As they sail near the shores of that desolate isle;
And their beacon shall be as they thitherward steer,
The black rock on the grave of the young mutineer.

These lines were printed in the Pawtucket Chronicle, from which paper I copied them, if I mistake not. A part of them, commencing with the third stanza, and leaving out the tenth stanza, were printed in the Nantucket Inquirer, December 14th, 1824, then edited by Samuel H. Jenks. The author, Henry Glover, son of Capt. Benjamin and Judith (Bunker) Glover, was born 6th of March, 1804, and died 30th of August, 1825, at Port au Prince, San Domingo. He was a young man of superior abilities and great promise, and was at the time of his death in his twenty-second year.

WILLIAM C. FOLGER.
